Beginner friendly

You are given a real-world task and must write the best AI prompt to solve it.

How to play: Read the task -> Write a detailed, specific prompt -> Submit -> Claude scores all entries -> Highest scorer wins.

Quick tips:

- Be specific - vague prompts score low
- Add context: role, tone, format, length
- Example: "Act as a career coach. Write a 60-word LinkedIn post..."

Spot the Hallucination

30 XP per round

Intermediate

Three AI-generated statements are shown - one contains a factual error. Find it!

How to play: Read all 3 statements carefully -> Identify which one has a factual error -> Select and submit your answer.

Quick tips:

- Watch for specific numbers, dates, and names
- AI often gets statistics slightly wrong
- Trust your knowledge - common sense helps here

Predict the Output

25 XP per round

Intermediate

Given a prompt, predict how a well-built AI would most likely respond.

How to play: Read the prompt shown -> Choose from multiple response options -> Pick the one a well-instructed AI would actually produce.

Quick tips:

- Think about what the prompt is actually asking
- Well-structured prompts get structured responses
- Eliminate obviously wrong or off-topic options first

Tournament Mode

Up to 500 XP

Advanced

Weekly tournament with multiple rounds. Top players compete for the leaderboard crown.

How to play: Register before tournament starts -> Compete in all rounds -> Accumulate points across rounds -> Top 3 win special badges.

- Study past winning prompts on the leaderboard

Pro Tips to Win More

1

Be specific in prompts

The single biggest mistake beginners make is being vague. Instead of "write an email", write "write a 100-word formal email to a client explaining a 2-day delay in project delivery. Tone: apologetic but confident."

2

Use role + task + format

Structure every prompt with: WHO the AI should act as, WHAT it should do, and HOW the output should be formatted. This three-part structure consistently scores higher than unstructured prompts.

3

Read prompts twice

In Spot the Hallucination and Predict the Output modes, speed is less important than accuracy. Read every option carefully before selecting - rushing leads to avoidable errors.

4

Play daily for streaks

Daily login and daily challenge streaks multiply your XP earnings. Even a quick 5-minute session keeps your streak alive and compounds your progress over weeks.

5

Study the leaderboard

Top players' usernames often hint at their strategy. Watch replays (when available) and pay attention to what kinds of prompts Claude scores highest.
